

FEDERICO MURATORI

Federico Muratori is an architect, based in Padova, graduated at Accademia di Architettura di Mendrisio.

His various interests has brought him to experience different fields of the arts such as film making, 3D artist and is now working as teaching assistant at luav Architecture school Venice, in the course of architectural composition.

His relationship with design starts very early, making furnitures for himself, than later for others, and for his city, with pieces of urban furniture.

In collaboration with his colleague and friends he participated at previous design events with Eva Collective.

FOR INFO:

<https://www.fakeauthentic.gallery/>

info@fakeauthentic.it

@ fa_fakeauthentic

TEAM MEMBERS

- Federico Muratori

THE BOOKSHELF THAT WENT MISSING

In 1987 architects Giulio Muratori and Pierino Zanon from Studio Muratori & Zanon designed a bookshelf called Menhir for a local marble industry Marmi e Pietre. A limited edition that went sold out almost immediately. Only two pieces remained, one to each architect. After the death of Zanon in 2014, his house was sold, together with every pieces of furniture inside, to a friend who greatly appreciated his design.

The piece in Muratori's possession, even though the marble piece was huge and massive, is now lost. Marmi e Pietre is now closed, and the drawings of Menhir are lost in the thousands of drawings of the 40+ years old office.

Only the ghost of the library now appears, if someone is able to remember it.

